DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Koch et al. (US 2004/0076177 A1).

Regarding claims 1 and 12, Koch discloses a client device (FIG. 1) comprising:

a network access device having at least a powered state and a power-off state, the powered state allowing the network access device to receive messages over a communication channel, the power-off state not allowing the network access device to receive messages over the communication channel, the network access device determines whether wireless coverage exists for the network access device and provides an indication of an out-of-coverage condition (paragraph 0033); and a controller that determines time periods for the network access device to be in the powered state, the time periods based on a discontinuous reception parameter obtained from the network access device, the controller also switching the network access device to the power-off state if there is an out-of-coverage condition for the network access device (paragraph 0053).

Regarding claims 2 and 13, Koch discloses a client device wherein the network access device indicates an out-of-coverage condition to the controller using a ring indicator (paragraph 0055).

Regarding claims 3 and 14, Koch discloses a client device wherein the network access device indicates an out-of-coverage condition to the controller using any signal on a communication bus therebetween (paragraph 0036).

Regarding claims 4 and 15, Koch discloses a client device wherein upon notice of the out-of-coverage condition from the network access device, the controller will be switched to a power-on state (paragraph 0055).

Regarding claims 5 and 16, Koch discloses a client device wherein upon indication of an out-of-coverage condition, the controller polls the network access device (paragraph 0037).

Regarding claims 6 and 17, Koch discloses a client device wherein the out-of-coverage condition is only indicated to the controller when the controller is in a power-off state (paragraph 0055).

Regarding claims 7 and 18, Koch discloses a client device wherein upon an out-of-coverage indication from the network access device, the controller waits a predetermined amount of time to determine if the network access device goes back into wireless coverage before directing the change of any power states (paragraph 0038).

Regarding claim 8, Koch discloses a client device wherein upon an out-of-coverage condition the network access device waits a predetermined amount of time to determine if the network access device goes back into wireless coverage before indicating the out-of-coverage condition to the controller (paragraph 0055).

Regarding claim 9, Koch discloses a client device wherein the client device is a Telematics unit in a vehicle, and wherein when a vehicle's ignition is turned off the controller would enable the ring indicator on the network access device and program the network access device to only activate the ring indicator when the network access device has been out-of-coverage for a predetermined amount of time (paragraph 0040).

Regarding claim 10, Koch discloses a client device wherein when the ignition to the vehicle is turned on and the controller is fully powered, the controller commands the network access device to disable the ring indication for out-of-coverage conditions (paragraph 0042).

Regarding claim 11, Koch discloses a client device wherein upon an out-of-coverage condition, the network access device can periodically turn on to search for coverage, wherein the interval between turned-on periods lengthens over time, the network access device providing an indication to the controller when changing search periods (paragraph 0045).
